

The children left the island the following day but the king realised the next day, they had taken his daughter.

The king believed Daedalus had helped the children kill the minotaur because he built the maze.

They began flying but Icarus did not listen and flew too close to the Sun.

He could not find his son so he named the island after him.